BUILDING A LEGACY

Kirk Hammons: a mother, wife, community volunteer, and a dear friend to Infant Crisis Services. Together, Kirk and her late husband of 50 years, Royce, built an incredibly full life in Oklahoma City as parents, neighbors, and supporters of a variety of organizations. Recounting her love for this community, Kirk told us, "I'm passionate about my city. Oklahoma City is a happy place to live. The people here are kind and welcoming. As a community, we are an enormously philanthropic city. People here are generous with their time, volunteering, and with their money." The foundation the Hammons built in Oklahoma City has led Kirk to discovering many of her life's other passions—family, faith, friends, travel, music, art, and children. Each of these passions has significantly impacted the way that Kirk shows up for her community and how she invests her time and money. "Through my travels I've found that people and cultures differ greatly, but we all have one underlying thing in common: we all have a need to give and receive love." For more than a decade, Kirk has given love to the infants and toddlers of Infant Crisis Services in multiple ways. Originally introduced to Infant Crisis Services through our Executive Director, Miki Farris, Kirk gives Miki's sincere passion for this mission credit for inspiring her own dedication to helping babies and children. Her choice to become involved with our mission was an easy one, telling us "The one goal of Infant Crisis Services is to care for babies and their families... that is what interests me most about this organization." With the 40-year anniversary of our services on the horizon this year, we ponder the meaning of a legacy. As a supporter of our events, our day-to-day fundraising efforts, and our planned giving initiatives, Kirk Hammons has ensured full bellies, dry diapers, and bright futures for so many infants and toddlers, a legacy that will create a ripple effect of positive change for this community she loves so dearly. When asked how Kirk would define a legacy, she told us "My personal legacy is my children and my grandchildren. They are the most important asset I am leaving. Children are our greatest resource. This is why Infant Crisis Services is so important; caring for these children and giving them their basic needs so they can grow up healthy, loved, and valued is a legacy that we should all strive for." Building a legacy at Infant Crisis Services can be as simple as filling out a form designating ICS as a beneficiary for your life insurance, donor advised fund, or retirement plan (like Kirk did)! "Planned gifts and major gifts are a wonderful way to show that you care for an organization and want it to flourish for years to come... these monetary gifts become your personal legacy," Kirk added. Of course, Kirk could not speak on the meaning of a legacy without pointing to our own fearless leader, stating "Miki Farris will be leaving a legacy of love and care for countless children because of her diligent work toward nourishing this mission and these programs." She continued, "I hope that I will leave a philanthropic legacy of care and commitment to this city and the organizations I have supported through the years, including Infant Crisis Services."

MISSION MOMENT WITH MIKI

Today, we stand on the threshold of a remarkable milestone. Infant Crisis Services is proudly celebrating 40 years of providing life-sustaining essentials to our community's tiniest and hungriest members.

Over four decades, we have been at the forefront of ensuring that every baby and toddler in our community has access to the basic necessities of life - food, formula, and diapers. These items form the building blocks of a healthy and promising future, and it has been our privilege to contribute to the well-being of over 375,000 families throughout our history.

As we reflect on these 40 years of service, I cannot help but marvel at the legacy we have collectively built. A legacy that echoes with the laughter of babies, the relief of parents, and the warmth of a community that comes together in times of need. The impact of our work extends far beyond the immediate provision of tangible necessities; it is a testament to the strength of a community that cares for its own.

A legacy, however, is not a static entity; it is dynamic and ever-evolving. While the work we've done in the last 40 years has brought us to this point, we envision our legacy expanding and reaching new heights throughout the next chapter of our journey.

To ensure the success of our mission for another 40 years and beyond, Infant Crisis Services needs you in our corner. Together, we can fortify the foundations of our legacy and pave the way for future generations to inherit a community that cares deeply for its youngest members.

In the coming months, we have planned a series of events and initiatives to celebrate our 40th birthday. We hope you will join us in commemorating this significant milestone and use it as an opportunity to renew our collective commitment to the well-being of our community's babies and toddlers.

Thank you for being an integral part of our journey so far. We honestly could not do it without you.

Always for the babies,

Miki Farris
